excerpt from August 7th, 2011

“...Ken went to church this morning.

I would've liked to go, too, but my stamina isn't so good and I think I need to do what I can to keep my strength up.

We struggle with the idea of putting ourselves sort of on display for all to see—but, on the other hand, people need to see God at work...and they need to see the peace and calm that comes from being in a relationship with the Lord. And the lack of fear. Oh, yeah. There are a lot of unknowns and, like everyone else, we have our moments. Our bad moments. But whatever happens, we're here on earth to glorify God and make His name known.

And that's what we aim to do.

After all, this is just our temporary living arrangement. There is much, much better in store!

...And now I feel like a little spiritual encouragement may be in order for the end of this post...directly from the Lord during one of our times together this morning:

“The Lord gives his people strength.
The Lord blesses them with peace.”

Psalm 29:11
New Living Translation

From the Lord's lips to your ears. Hugs!
(And hope to see you again tomorrow.)”
